Tilting at Goalposts

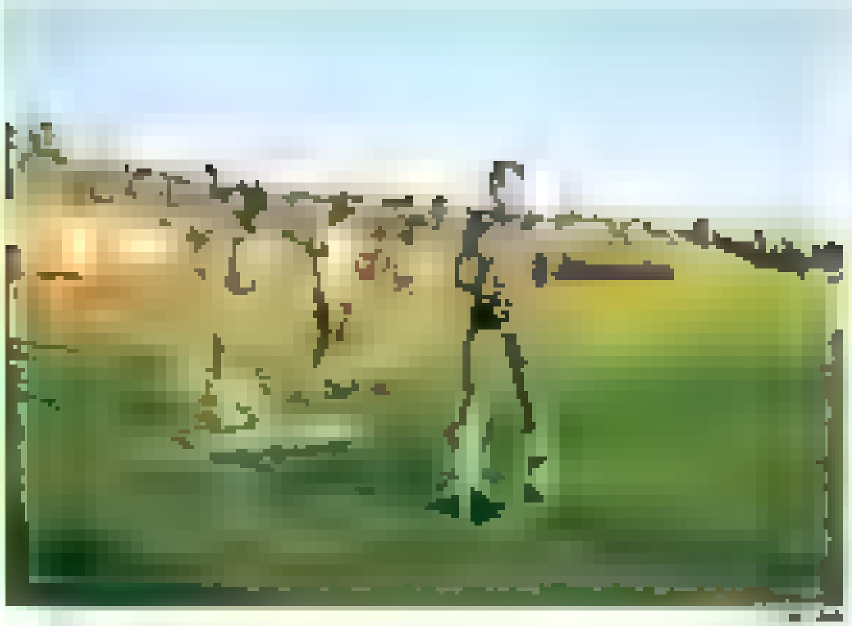

More than 90 percent of high school football players will never suit up in college, let alone the pros. But that doesn't stop them from pursuing their dreams.

August

"I figured it was over," Washington says of having to sit out a year. Dreams of a college scholarship, making a difference as a player. All of it.

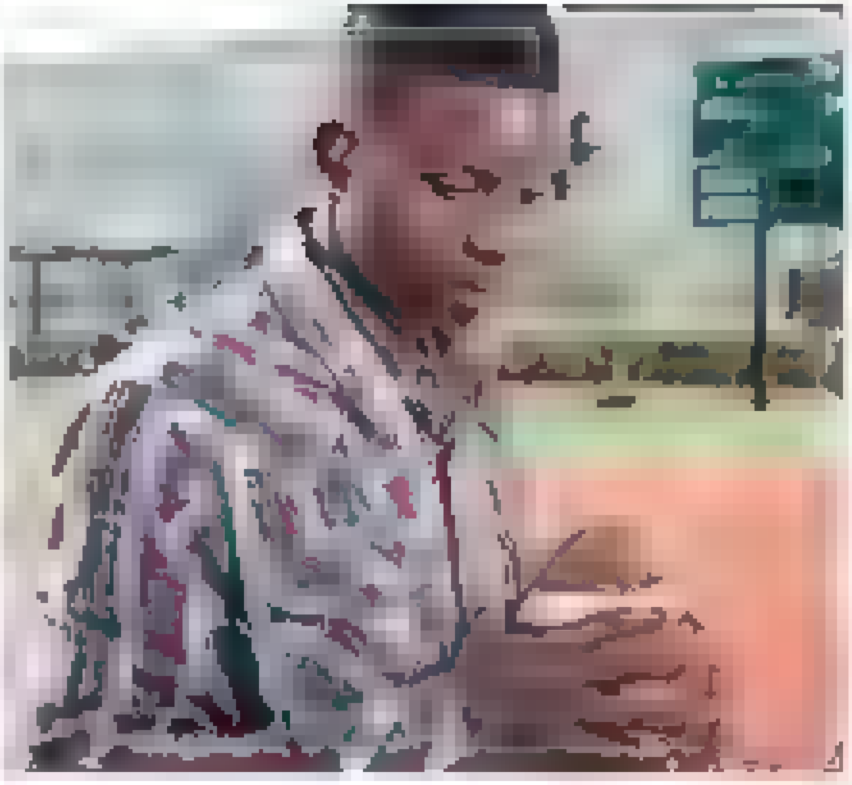

September

The University of Oregon has the inside track on Banks. "They have an amazing facility," he says. "Everything's there, even a barbershop."

December

> "A lot of times they'll tell a kid that 'if our first choice drops out, you're our man,'" coach Kahn says. "But it's really five kids they're telling that to. This is the reality of cutthroat college recruiting."
